Bradley Gray is a London born and based actor/writer with a confident, Cockney edge who thrives in contemporary and recent period productions. With a training background in The Identity School of Acting and Middleweek Newton Film School, Bradley understands the fundamentals of stage and screen acting and has put this into great use with previous credits at The Old Vic, The Globe Theatre and the BBC. Furthermore, Bradley has recently graduated from Birkbeck College, University of London with a degree in Creating Writing & English (Hons.) and is currently in the process of writing his own material with the hope of producing it in the future, and has worked as a script doctor in the past in the independent scene. Recently, Bradley has partaken in workshops at Run At It Shouting to further cement his talent and will be proceeding with acting lessons with coach Tilly Blackwood in the near future.
